RESEARCH INTERESTS

My broad research and writing interest is reasoning and decision-making. My experimental investigations focus on causal cognition (how people decide what caused something to occur or what can prevent an event from occurring), social cognition (how perceived relative status impacts fairness in economic transactions), and moral cognition (which factors influence our decisions to harm or help others). I also write scientific essays summarizing psychological research for popular venues such Psychology Today, Scientific American, PBS Newshour, and the Chronicle of Higher Education. My New Scientist Academy videorecorded lectures based on my book Good Thinking (Cambridge University Press, 2021) can be found here: <https://academy.newscientist.com/courses/how-to-think-rationally-and-creatively>
